Above, Albany Volunteer Fire Department members moved to an outbuilding located to the left of a house that caught fire Saturday night on the Wisdom Dock Road. The outbuilding caught fire for a brief moment, but firefighters were able to extinguish the flames before the small structure was completely lost. The main structure, which was vacant at the time of the fire, was a total loss. Below left, another scene as firefighters worked to contain the blaze at the main structure. Below right, the scene as it appeared in the daylight hours following the blaze.

Fire destroys vacant house, adjacent homes saved

At 11:32 p.m. Saturday night, the Albany Fire Department was called to the scene of a structure fire which resulted in the complete destruction of a home on Wisdom Dock Road.

Albany Fire Chief Robert Roeper said when he arrived on scene the house was completely enveloped in flames.

“The only thing we could do was try to contain it,” Roeper said. “There were two mobile homes, one on each side of the house and we tried to keep them from catching fire.”

Roeper said there was some minor damage to an outbuilding on the neighboring property, but the homes were saved.

“We had to evacuate the neighbors. We got everybody out without injuries,” Roeper said.

The house that caught fire was unoccupied at the time according to Roeper.

He also said he didn’t know an exact cause of the fire, but said owners were cleaning the house in order to get it ready to sell.

Other than the fire, there was minor cause for alarm for the people in close proximity of the fire.

Bright flashes and loud popping sounds were coming from the flames that were possibly caused by live ammunition that was inside the home.

Roeper said when ammo is in a house and it is on fire, there is very little danger in the area around the burning structure unless the ammo is loaded in a gun.

“It could be deadly if there is ammo loaded in a gun,” Roeper said. “It’s like pulling the trigger. I’ve been hit with shells before in previous fires. The lead bullets don’t really go far when they explode unless they travel through a barrel.”

Roeper also said the bright flashing lights could have also been the power lines close to the house.

“We had to call the RECC to come and shut the power off,” Roeper said.

According to Roeper, the house is owned by the Steve Burton heirs.

Johnson reflects on two terms as 3rd District squire

Still at a relatively young age, Willard Johnson has accomplished quite a lot in his 42 years already, both in business and in politics. The current president of Monticello Banking Company, also got the opportunity to serve as a member of the Clinton County Fiscal Court, a distinction he is thankful for.

Johnson cited his recent job promotion to President of the Monticello Banking Company of Albany as the reason behind his decision to relinquish his magisterial postion.

An interim magistrate for the third district will be appointed by Kentucky Governor Steve BeShearer, to serve until a new magistrate can be elected to fill out Johnson’s unexpired term. That election will take place during the fall November general election.

Johnson, during an interview with the Clinton County News last week, just days after he resigned his political position last Tuesday, April 10, reviewed the five years plus he served on the court representing the 3rd Magisterial District. He was elected twice to the job, in 2006 and again in 2010.

A Clinton County native and 1989 graduate of Clinton County High School, Johnson also graduated from banker’s school in 2000 and the University of Colorado in 2007. Prior to working with the local bank, he worked for seven years for a finance company in Monticello.

The former magistrate is married to the former Sherry York, a first grade teacher at Albany Elementary School with some 15 years with the local school district.

Johnson said he originally sought the magisterial office six years ago because he had always been interested in politics and the “political arena,” adding he wanted to see if he could make a difference.

In praising his (former) fellow court members, he called the magistrates position a “24-7” job. “No matter where you go, people have issues and problems they want to talk about.”

Although the duties of a fiscal court member varies, he said the

Absentee voting underway, primary ballot will be brief

Absentee ballot voting is now underway for those individuals who will be out of the county on election day, or who have medical problems that will prevent them from getting to the polls.

Voters can now apply for paper absentee ballots, which will have to be returned and in the county clerk’s office by election day.

The voting machine will be set up in the county clerk’s office for those who will be absent from the county on election day and wish to cast an early ballot on the machine. County Clerk Jim Elmore said the voting machine should be set up later this month.

Only a few races will be on the ballot on May 22, but several more—including non-partisan races for city council and school board seats will be on the November ballot. Candidates seeking non-partisan seats this fall will have until mid-August to file their candidacy.

For more information about any aspect of the election, the voting process or delinquent tax information, citizens may contact the county clerk’s office at 387-5943.

IDA meets with quorum, another board member submits resignation

After not having enough members for a quorum during its first scheduled meeting of the year in February, the Clinton County Industrial Development Authority did conduct its first regular meeting of the year last Thursday morning at the IDA-Welcome Center with four of six members present. Also on hand was Chad Irwin and Brad Irwin, who were listed on the meeting minutes as loan recipients. Former IDA chairman Rick Mercader was also present.

The board, on a motion by Keith McWhorter, first voted to accept the resignation of long-time board member and officer Janie Gibson, who had tenured her resignation earlier this year.

A replacement on the IDA board will have to be made by Clinton Fiscal Court.

Gibson was also serving as board secretary treasurer and on a motion by board chairman Jim Soma, they voted to appoint Debbie Brown to replace Gibson as board treasurer.

On separate motions, the IDA also approved minutes from the December 2011 meeting; voted to pay claims and bills and approved the CCIDA expenditure reports.

Board member McWhorter then made a motion to enter the USDA Audit into the meeting minutes.

In a cover letter to the Industrial Authority from Rural Development area director Barry R. Turner, dated February 10, 2012, it noted that the “Clinton County Industrial Development Authority is using sound loan making methods and your servicing efforts are reasonable.”

The board then entered into executive session to discuss a loan prospect but took no official action upon returning to open session.

The next regular meeting of the Clinton County Industrial Development Authority is scheduled for June 14.

Construction continues to progress in the Snow Community of central Clinton County, as the new Blue Grass Stockyards facility nears completion. Crews continue to work on several different areas of the complex, including the main structure shown above. Additional work is being done on other areas, including a scalehouse and parking area while infrastructure work on a nearby waterline is also underway.

Company plans are to hold a Grand Opening Ribbon Cutting ceremony on Wednesday, May 23, with a livestock sale to follow that event.

Local quizzers lead Kentucky Bible quiz teams to championship

William Cox, Vincent Boils, Savannah Stockton, Silas Melton, and Amber Cross represented the Kentucky District in the Bible quizzing portion of Top Nazarene Talent at Trevecca Nazarene University on April 13 and 14.

William and Vincent earned spots on the Kentucky A team, while Savannah, Silas, and Amber earned spots on the Kentucky B team at district finals in March. Regional finals are held each year during TNT at TNU, involving teams from Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi. The competition includes a round robin, followed by a double elimination tournament for A-league and a single elimination tournament for B-league, for the top six teams in each division.

The Kentucky A team was undefeated in the round robin and entered the tournament as the No. 1 seed, receiving a bye through the first round. Kentucky A defeated North Carolina and advanced to quiz Central Florida in the semi-finals. Kentucky A beat Central Florida, but had to play them twice more in the finals, losing the first game but winning the second and claiming the championship.

Kentucky A was coached by Kentucky District Teen Bible Quizzing Director Ammie Marcum. Individually, William Cox was the No. 5 quizzier in A-league and earned a spot on the TNU Regional B team. Kentucky B was also undefeated in the round robin and entered the tournament as the No. 1 seed, receiving a bye through the first round. Kentucky B defeated South Carolina and advanced to quiz Tennessee in the finals, also claiming the championship. Kentucky B was coached by High-Hill coach Sid Scott. Individually, Silas Melton was the No. 1 quizzier and Savannah Stockton was the No. 4 quizzier in B-league.

William, Vincent, Savannah, Silas, and Amber will all again represent Kentucky on district all-star teams at the national Bible quizzing finals Q2012 on July 2 - 6 at Olivet Nazarene University in Bourbonnais, Illinois.

biggest responsibility was the financial responsibility to the county.

“A lot of people still believe a magistrate only deals in gravel and blacktopping...but that’s only about five percent of the job,” he said. He noted court members work for job creation, talking with companies and trying to get businesses to locate to the county.

Johnson noted the three largest accomplishments he was a part of during his years on the fiscal court, the biggest one being the decision of Blue Grass Stockyards to locate here. That location near Keystone Foods along Hwy. 90 is also in the third district, and the facility is currently under construction with plans to open next month.

“It will not only create jobs, but it is also something positive for farmers,” said Johnson. He said you rarely see the state and federal governments working to help farmers’ needs, and noted the new stockyards was a collaboration with different entities, including county government.

Another accomplishment he said he was happy to see completed early in his term was the city’s approximate $7 million water expansion project that received assistance from the county and other government agencies.

A third major project that was also completed during the past few years is that of the Twin Lakes Family Wellness Center, something Johnson referred to as a “huge asset” to the community. However, he still questions why the officials at the center aren’t exploring the use of natural gas in the area to heat the facility and pool, which he feels would be an enormous money saver.

Johnson said the thing he will miss the most about being a magistrate was the interaction with the public and his constituents and the thing he would miss the least was “the late night phone calls.”

The former magistrate stressed that in the future, he would like to see the judge/executive and court members be able to better work together, coming up with some similar ideas and work to get them accomplished.

He also said he would like to see the proposed recycling center project move forward in Clinton County, theorizing it would not only create more much needed jobs and added revenues, but help clean up the city and county.

Johnson also discussed the tensions with the fiscal court over the last couple of years, due primarily to budget issues.

The former magistrate said, in his opinion, the primary cause of the budget problems today is that inflation has caused dramatic increases in all expenses involved in operating the county--gas prices, insurance rates and the overall cost of doing business--while county revenues basically have remained about the same for the past 20 years. “It’s caused a burden on the court to try and balance the budget,” he said.

Johnson predicted the county may have to face some form of taxes, budget cuts or a combination of both. “You (county) could operate ‘smaller’ but that would likely mean cutting services,” he said.

As he proposed earlier this year while still a member of the court, Johnson feels making the ambulance service a taxing district could solve much of the county’s financial shortfalls. He noted funds from such a tax would be earmarked specifically to operate the service and could be overseen by a board to make sure the money is used for what it’s collected for.

“There are intelligent people who would volunteer to serve on such (an ambulance board) to make sure it got off to a good start,” said Johnson, adding, “it’s (ambulance service) the greatest need the county has.”

Johnson concluded by thanking all the people of the 3rd Magisterial District. “They’ve been like family to me,” he said, regarding his former constituents. “They mean a lot to me and I’ll never forget their patronage and good will. I appreciate the opportunity I had to serve them and their understanding of the move (from magistrate) that I had to make.”

These members will now compete at the FBLA State Conference on April 23-25, 2012 at The Galt House in Louisville.

Every day is Earth Day to Kentucky farmers

As the themes of soil conservation, clean water, reduced carbon emissions and other environmentally-friendly topics take center stage for the annual Earth Day celebration on April 22, it is important to note that Kentucky has a workforce 85,000-strong aiming for those same goals year-round – farmers.

“Farmers have always been the primary caretakers of the land and they carry that responsibility with honor and pride,” said Kentucky Farm Bureau president Mark Haney. “In fact, I would make the argument that farmers were the world’s first environmentalists.”

Kentucky’s farmers not only do a great deal to protect their land, they strive to make it better. Aside from planting trees, protecting wetlands and providing wildlife sanctuaries, our farmers work diligently to improve environmental quality by installing conservation buffers on their farmland.

Across the U.S., farmers have voluntarily enrolled approximately 30 million acres into the nation’s Conservation Reserve

Program to date, making it the largest public-private partnership for conservation and wildlife habitat in the country.

“Unlike most other jobs, farming is a family affair and usually passed down from one generation to the next,” added Haney. “It only makes sense that farmers would try to take the best possible care of their land.”

Embracing new technology, farmers today are also adopting advanced methods for managing their land and investing in business services that will help them excel in an environmentally sensitive world.

From contour farming (planting crops in horizontal rows around hillsides instead of vertically, which keeps soil from washing away) and the Kentucky-pioneered no-till farming practices (leaving crop stalks and roots in the ground after a harvest to prevent soil erosion and utilize less energy while working the field) to dead animal composting and complex manure management systems, sound environmental stewardship is a 24/7, year-round job for the Bluegrass

State’s agricultural producers.

Farmers are also at the forefront of producing clean, renewable fuels that provide for a healthier environment and a wide array of “green” jobs around the world. Through agricultural efficiencies made possible by biotechnology, farmers are additionally able to shrink their environmental footprint, reduce their use of pesticides and produce more food on less land with even fewer impacts on soil and water resources.

Kentucky Farm Bureau agrees that it is good to have a day set aside to intentionally talk about what is needed to save our environment, but feels it is more important to do something about it. If Americans really want our nation to “go green,” we should support the first green industry: agriculture.

“Farmers don’t celebrate Earth Day just once a year; they live it out every day,” Haney concluded. “It’s a huge weight to carry, but because of their many environmental contributions we can all enjoy greener pastures.”

Softball team makes run at All 'A', remains perfect in district play

The Clinton County Softball Team is now 14-5 on the year with its last loss coming at the hands of Glasgow in the All "A" Classic Regional Tournament held Saturday at Metcalfe County.

Clinton County fell to the Lady Scotties by a final of 10-0 in six innings on Saturday.

To get to the finals, Clinton County defeated Todd Central in it's opening game on Friday, April 13, 7-4.

Clinton County then defeated Cumberland County in the semi-finals, 5-1, but couldn't get past Glasgow in the finals.

The Lady Bat Dawgs were home on Monday, taking on Wayne County that resulted in a 15-5, five inning win for Clinton County.

Clinton County also hosted Metcalfe County on Tuesday, but that game was too late for press deadline.

The Lady Bat Dawgs' next home game will be Thursday against Cumberland County. Game time is set for 5 p.m.

Mariah Thompson made contact for a base hit during the first inning against Russell County on Tuesday, April 10. The Lady Bat Dawgs defeated the Lady Lakers 12-2 in five innings.

Veronica Lowhorn made a catch in center field last week against Russell County. Clinton County won the game by a final of 12-2 in five innings. Clinton County is now 14-5 on the season. The team will host Cumberland County on Thursday, April 19.

Left, pitcher Taylor Flowers fielded a ground ball and threw a runner out at first during the first inning against Russell County on Tuesday, April 10. Above, Michelle Wray knocked a double to score two runs against Russell County. Clinton County won the game 12-2 in five innings.

Tennis teams picked up wins last week

The Clinton County Racket Dawgs hit the courts heavy last week with matches that resulted in several wins for both teams.

On April 10, the Lady Racket Dawgs traveled to Pulaski County to take on the Lady Maroons, winning only one match in singles play.

Hailey Neal defeated her opponent for the only win of the meet, 7-5.

Bianca Soma lost her match, 8-2, Laura Groce, Maegan Harlan and Alissa Cook were shut-out, 6-0, while Kiley Hoppe lost 6-1 in singles play.

In doubles competition, the team of Groce and Hoppe fell, 8-0, Katie Huff and Cook were defeated, 6-4 and Abby Craig and Harlan lost 6-0.

On Thursday, April 12, the Lady Racket Dawgs took on Cumberland County and won six matches while dropping five.

In singles play, it was Groce, Cook and Ashley Harper winning, 6-4, 6-1, and 6-3 respectively, while Harlan, Hoppe and Groce lost.

In doubles play, the team of Groce and Hoppe won 6-4, Cook and Huff defeated their opponents, 6-3 and Craig and Huff won, 6-1.

The team of Rachel Claborn and Harper lost a doubles match, 6-3, while Harlan and Craig fell,

On Friday, April 13, Clinton County took on Barren County and only won one match out of nine.

The only win for Clinton County came in singles play as Alissa Cook defeated her opponent, 8-4.

Monday, April 16, the Lady Racket Dawgs traveled to Glasgow to face the Lady Scotties.

Soma won one of two singles matches, winning 8-0 for one match and losing 8-1 in her first match.

Hoppe won her singles match, 8-1, but Groce lost her match, 8-4.

In doubles competition, the team of Groce and Hoppe lost, 6-2 in their first match, but pulled out a win in their second doubles match, 6-1.

On the boys' team, the Racket Dawgs also traveled to Pulaski County Tuesday resulting in four wins and five losses.

In singles play, it was Jordan Vincent picking up the only singles win, 8-0.

Kolby Smith, Chris Cox, Zach McFall and Jarod Hunter all fell in their singles matches, 7-5, 6-0, 6-2 and 7-6 respectively.

Matthew Savage rounded out singles play with a 7-6 loss.

Clinton County picked up three wins in doubles play with the team of Vincent and Smith, 8-3, Glen England and Haley Matthews, 6-4, and Clay Choate and Kyle Choate winning, 6-1.

On Thursday, April 12, the Racket Dawgs took on Cumberland County, picking up nine wins and only one loss.

Vincent, Smith, Matthews, England, McFall and Hunter all won their singles matches and the team picked up three out of four games in doubles competition for nine wins total for the match.

On Friday, April 13, the Racket Dawgs won three of nine matches against Barren County.

Vincent, Smith, and England won their singles matches, 7-6, 6-0 and 8-4 respectively.

Clinton County failed to pick up a win in doubles competition, losing three matches.

On Monday, April 16, Clinton County took on Glasgow and won two out of seven total matches.

The only two wins came in singles competition as Hunter and Savage won 8-1 and 8-3 respectively.

Smith, Chris Cox, McFall and the team of England and Matthews and Clay Choate and Kyle Choate lost their matches for a total of five losses for the meet.

SPORTS

Sports in Kentucky by Bob Watkins Zeller decision shows contrast, love of hoops in Kentucky and Indiana

A projected lottery pick, Indiana's Tyler Zeller will not be available for the NBA draft.

"I grew up hoping that one day I would get the opportunity to play in the NBA, but at this point, I'm not ready for my college experience to be over," Zeller said in a press release.

What curious logic for a 19-year-old – not ready for the college experience to end.

Zeller projects a clear difference in how basketball is revered in Indiana and how it is seen in Kentucky. Hoosier fans love their game. In part, it's why cable television airs Hoosiers over and over through all seasons.

In large numbers Indianians continue to support and take pride in the summer series with Kentucky. Hoosiers take pride in being chosen to the team. This side of the river the two-game series goes begging for support and participation. That even a few Kentucky high school seniors decline to even try out to represent the Bluegrass State is outrageous.

Says here, fans in Kentucky have fallen under a John Calipari hypnosis, embracing an attitude that winning regular season games, even going to SEC's springtime party, is little more than an aggravation, on the way to Final Fours.

A sad thing, seems to me, that Big Blue Nation has come to celebrate UK's one-and-done and quickest way to "show me the money!"

Kind of makes Indiana's Tyler Zeller a young man of vision, doesn't it?

THUMBS UP FOR CUBAN ... sort of

From vantage point of NBA franchise owner, Dallas Mavericks owner Mark Cuban weighed in on college basketball's one-and-done issue recently.

Three years, Cuban told ESPN.com, "before a kid can declare for the NBA draft would prevent players from making poor decisions that affect the rest of their lives."

And, here's logic you haven't seen lately.

"I just think there (are) a lot more kids (who) get ruined coming out early or going to school trying to be developed to come out early than actually make it.

"For every Kobe (Bryant) or (Kevin) Garnett or Carmelo (Anthony) or LeBron (James), there's 100 Lenny Cookes."

A New York high school star Cooke wasn't selected after declaring for the 2002 draft and never played a minute in the NBA.

Cuban: "What about the kids (who) aren't college material or whatever? We just put them in the D-League for three years, then they become draft-eligible with their class."

Mark Cuban's ideas here are logical and sound. His business approach to profit the NBA is of no interest here. If the NBA as it is today, collapsed tomorrow, it would be a blessing.

College basketball's style is unfortunately, more NBA-like every season. Greed-driven NCAA administrators aren't fooling anybody. They should have courage enough to embrace Cuban's approach. Make college basketball a game for its fans again instead of CBS Sports and NBA industries.

BALL COACH POLL NUMBERS

A general election year, 2012, reminds us we live in an era when poll numbers and approval/disapproval ratings are high on television news' food chain. And, rating professions from the bottom up (lowest of the low in credibility), numbers are popular too. Least believable?

- Bottom, politicians.
- Second from bottom? The media.
- Third from the bottom? FOX News. (just kidding).
- And, in dead heat with politicians for first place, college ball coaches.

In Fayetteville last week, the squint-eyed red-haired man captured inside a neck brace with a redder-than usual red face, was Bobby Petrino. Ex-Arkansas coach will not contest his firing as football coach. Why?

In a clever connect to Rick Pitino's suit versus Karen Cunagin Sypher, and under this headline: Lessons From An $18 Million Affair: Why Rick Pitino Survived a Scandal and Bobby Petrino Couldn't, one internet writer, Allen St. John, explained:

"The issue was not whether Petrino would get his job back—no chance of that—but whether he could collect some or all of the $18 million buyout provided for in his contract. Sleaze aside, he violated university regulations—and probably state law—by putting (Jessica) Dorrell on the payroll. In short, her $55,735 a year job cost Petrino $18 million, plus the collateral damage to his career prospects."

Indeed.

So, Petrino is latest ball coach who became candidate for a Wall of Shame ... alongside Kelvin Sampson, Hal Mumme and Billy Gillispie, Clem Haskins at Minnesota, and the guy who ran Bountygate in New Orleans, Sean Payton.

Ball coaches who, well, moved their lips.

Thing about Petrino, if his motorcycle incident, sun burned face and clunky damage control effort weren't so pathetic, he would be more fun to spew disgust at than firing high hard ones at Billy Packer, Bob Knight, Dick Vitale and pick-a-politician, all rolled into one.

THE PITINO LINE

Richard Pitino as new head basketball coach at Florida International University looks a good fit. A good idea to go with it: Pitino signs a good faith one-year contract with FIU, renewable next spring by mutual agreement. No buy-out, no problem.

The new coach goes recruiting Joe the Aircraft Carrier and Johnny Jump Shot with: "I will commit 100 per cent to make you the best basketball player you can be ... in one year. Because, if he/we win big, neither or both of us might be at FIU next year."

Pitino line. Impressive, the 25-man list of Rick Pitino assistants become head coaches. From John Kuester in 1981 at Boston U. to son Richard the Pitino line includes two with national championship rings – Tubby Smith and Billy Donovan (2).

Richard Pitino is a head coach at 29, his father was 26 when he took a job at Boston University in 1978.

NERLENS NOEL

Newest Wildcat basketball prodigy Nerlens Noel arrives in Lexington at a moment in time when he will be test case for John Calipari's notion "... Kentucky isn't for everybody."

Noel will try and play his way out of long shadow, Anthony Davis.

Last week a media-dot-com hoops analyst asked the kid if he expects to break Anthony Davis' shot block record?

"Of course," he said.

Wrong question and child-like reply.

A better inquiry: So, kid, think you can replace Anthony Davis, college player of the year who won the award because of his team-first personality, poise and satisfaction with eight shots a game?

Noel is under the gun. Kentucky isn't for everybody.

And so it goes.

Asa Flowers killed this 23 and a half pound gobbler while hunting with his uncle, Johnny Schmenk, on Saturday, April 14, 2012. It had an 11 inch beard and one inch spurs.

Caleb Guffey, and his grandpa David Guffey, caught this striper while fishing on Lake Cumberland with Miller Tallent. The fish weighed 23 pounds and was 39 inches long.

Perfect timing for turkey season

Kentucky's spring wild turkey season has been so successful the past 15 years in part because of the timing of opening day.

"I think we've accomplished our goal of having a productive season in a relatively short time frame," said Steven Dobey, wild turkey program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "We've hit that window between the onset of breeding and nesting."

Kentucky's statewide spring turkey season opens every year on the Saturday closest to April 15 and lasts for 23 days. This year, the season dates are April 14 through May 6, 2012.

The turkey hatch peaks in late May or June, weeks after hunting has concluded.

"Our flock is stable, with a population estimate of about 250,000 birds," said Dobey. "Geographically, Kentucky is in a great location. We have relatively mild winters, a long growing season and a fairly dry early summer, all of which benefit turkeys."

The harvest of turkeys during the spring season has grown steadily in the past 15 years, from 13,606 in 1996 to 32,191 in 2011.

"Our stocking efforts have paid off and in the early years we had a conservative harvest strategy that's really paying dividends now," said Dobey. "Statewide, our turkey population is in excellent shape."

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife

Emma McClellan killed her first turkey using her Grandpa Billy's gun while hunting with her dad BJ McClellan on Saturday, April 14, 2012.

released 6,760 wild turkeys on 430 sites across the state from 1978 through 1997. Restoration was completed in 1997, when Kentucky's wild turkey population had increased to around 130,000 birds.

Hunters bagged over 30,000 turkeys for two consecutive years for the first time starting in 2010, when there was a record harvest of 36,097 birds.

Dobey said he believes last year's spring harvest of 32,191 would have been higher, possibly setting a new record, if the weather had cooperated. "About 58 percent of the harvest occurs during the two-day youth-only season and the first week of our statewide season," said Dobey.

Weather is the one factor that biologists can't control. "We keep our fingers crossed every year. If it's sunny on opening weekend, we'll have a higher harvest," said Dobey. "Last season we had heavy rains across most of the state, and the opening weekend harvest dropped 27.1 percent from the previous year."

This season hunters are likely to encounter fewer juvenile gobblers while afield. The weather had an adverse impact on last year's reproduction. The statewide brood survey for 2011 showed a 42 percent decline in the number of hens observed with at least one poult (young turkey). Statewide, the average number of poults per hen dropped to roughly one and a half.

"Western and central Kentucky appear to have had a little better reproductive success than the rest of the state," said Dobey. "The birds that nested the earliest were significantly impacted by the heavy rains and flooding."

Hunters could see fewer older gobblers, too, this coming season. The good news, however, is there will be lots of two-year-old birds which do most of the gobbling.

Kentucky's turkey flock is arguably the best in the region.

Based on the number of birds taken per square mile, Kentucky has a higher harvest than six of the seven adjoining states -- Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Missouri and Illinois. "We're on par with Tennessee," said Dobey, "but our season is half as long as Tennessee's, and our bag limit is half theirs."

Dobey said Kentucky has about 90,000 turkey hunters.

Of the successful hunters, about 25 percent take the season limit of two birds in the spring. Most of the birds harvested are adults. "Last season 16.7 percent of the birds taken were juveniles (jakes)," said Dobey. "With the impressive statewide flock in Kentucky hunters are able to be selective, and key on older birds."

Author Art Lander Jr. has been writing about the outdoors since the 1970s. He is a staff writer for Kentucky Afield Magazine.

Makayla Groce killed this turkey while hunting with her fiance Stevie Owens in Clinton County Monday. The turkey had two beards, measuring five inches and one beard measuring three inches. It weighed 20 pounds and had three-quarter inch spurs.

Lucas Abner is shown with the turkey he harvested Saturday, April 14. It had an 11 and a half-inch beard with one and one quarter-inch spurs. Also pictured is his hunting buddy Landrick Garner.

Local sports aplenty - for a few more weeks

This time of year is somewhat of an "in-between" time usually for sports news, with the exception of the action that goes on practically daily at the Clinton County High School spring sports complex.

Bat Dawgs, Lady Bat Dawgs and Racket Dawgs are on the fields/courts on a daily basis, either home or away, and with the favorable weather we've had this spring, there has been plenty of games and matches and few rain-outs.

The Bat Dawgs are slated to host Russell County this Thursday in a game set to get underway at 5:00 p.m. while at the same time, our Lady Bat Dawgs will be playing host to Cumberland County. That match-up is set to begin at 5:30 p.m.

Over on the tennis courts, the Racket Dawgs will be hosting Greenwood on Thursday, both boys and girls, and on Saturday, the boys play host to Casey County.

Also of interest to local high school sports supporters, a couple of fundraising events are in the near future - both of which will benefit CCHS athletics.

This Saturday, April 21, the Clinton County Golf Boosters will be hosting the "Fore The Kids" golf scramble. The four-person tourney will be played at 76 Falls Country Club beginning at 9:00 a.m. and includes a $50 entry fee.

The event is a blind draw event and more information or to sign-up, contact Kenny Stinson at 387-8355.

The second fundraising event coming up on the calendar is the "Dawg Walk-Run" that is scheduled for a week from Saturday on April 28.

Benefiting the Clinton County High School Volley Dawgs, the Run/Walk gets underway at the high school at 8:00 a.m., and has a $15 entry fee with all runners being given a T-shirt. Sign-ups begin that morning at 7:00 a.m.

Our sympathy goes out to those who have lost loved ones.

Nashville District wants to return Native American remains

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Nashville District wants to return the remains of one Native American to their tribe after being found in Cheatham County last year.

The Corps is seeking comments on a plan to transfer custody of the human remains in accordance with the Native American Graves and Repatriation Act.

Dr. Valerie McCormack, Nashville District cultural resources manager, said the remains were discovered in October 2011 on a beach in front of a bank on Cheatham Lake. "The remains may have eroded from the river bank after the May 2010 flood, or they may have been looted," she said.

After the 2010 flood there were numerous incidents of people looting Native American graves on the Cumberland River. It is illegal to remove artifacts from federal land, and punishment for illegally removing artifacts from Corps land can lead to a felony conviction and up to a $500,000 fine under the Archaeological Resources Protection Act.

The Corps consulted with modern tribes whose ancestors lived in the Cumberland River Valley. The remains are suspected to date from a time period that makes it difficult to precisely pinpoint descendants. During historic time Chickasaws occupied lands in the Tennessee River Valley, but their hunting and trading area included a vast area including Cheatham County.

As part of the effort to return the remains to a correct Nation, the Corps is publishing public notices in the Tennessean, the Ada Evening News, home of the Chickasaw Nations, and the Tulsa World, home of many of the Nations that were removed from Tennessee.

If no other tribe or individual claims the remains before May 21, 2012, the custody of the remains will be transferred to the Chickasaw Nation.

Claims for custody can be submitted in writing to U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Nashville District, (CELRN-PM-P), 801 Broadway, Nashville, TN, 37203. Call McCormack at 615-736-7847 for more information.

Hospice of Lake Cumberland announces annual Camp Promise

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month. This month and throughout the year, The Adanta Group, Lake Cumberland's Community Mental Health Center, encourages all community members and organizations to play a role in making Lake Cumberland a better place for our children and families.

By ensuring that parents have the knowledge, skills, and resources they need to care for their children, together we can help promote children's social and emotional well-being and prevent child maltreatment within families and communities.

Using effective interventions, domestic violence advocates, judges, clinical therapists, law enforcement officers, physicians, child protective workers, school personnel, and community members can help keep families safe and break the abuse and violence cycle.

Research shows that when parents and guardians possess six protective factors, the risk for neglect and abuse diminish and optimal outcomes for children, youth, and families are promoted. The six protective factors are:

- Nurturing and attachment
- Knowledge of parenting and of child and youth development
- Parental flexibility
- Social connections
- Concrete supports for parents
- Social and emotional developmental well-being

"April is a time to celebrate the important role that the Lake Cumberland community members play in protecting children," said Jamie Burton, Adanta's Chief Executive Officer. "Everyone's participation is critical. Focusing on ways to build and promote the protective factors, in every interaction with children and families, is the best thing our community can do to prevent child maltreatment and promote the social and emotional well-being of children and their families."

According to the Fourth National Incidence Study of Child

Abuse and Neglect, Report to Congress, US Department of Health and Human Services (2010) more than 1.25 million children experienced maltreatment in 2005-2006 – this number is equivalent to one child in every 58 in the United States. Forty-four percent (44percent) were reported to have been abused, while 61percent were reported to have been neglected (children may be classified in more than one category.)

Most of the abused children (58percent) experienced physical abuse; 24percent reported sexual abuse; and 27percent reported emotional abuse. Almost 50percent of the children experienced educational neglect; 38percent reported physical neglect; and 25percent reported emotional neglect.

Females are disproportionately at a greater risk of sexual abuse, which leads to higher rates of abuse in general among girls compared to boys.

Clinton Judge/Executive Lyle Huff and Albany Mayor Nicky Smith agreed to signed a proclamation Monday proclaiming the month of April as Child Abuse Prevention Month in Clinton County.

Warm weather leads to exceptionally early silage harvest for area farmers

By Katie Pratt

Like most producers, Adair County dairy farmer Jonathan Gaskins regularly checks the progress of his forage crops, but he found a big surprise when checking his wheat fields early this spring.

“We were thinking we had two or three more weeks. But we came out here and checked it, and it was ready to harvest,” he said.

Gaskins began harvesting 110 acres of wheat April 3 and finished April 11. Normally wheat is harvested for silage during the last week of April or the first week of May.

Wheat is used for silage to feed lactating dairy cattle. Silage is a high quality feed that can increase milk production. To get the best quality silage, it's important to harvest the crop when it reaches late boot stage, but it's a really short window between when the crop reaches that stage and when it begins to head.

In mid-March, Gaskins saw the crop was maturing quickly and called Nick Roy, Adair County's agriculture and natural resources agent with the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, to check his crop. Gaskins wasn't the first dairy farm that Roy had checked for silage progress.

“The crop is at least three, if not four, weeks of ahead of schedule,” Roy said. “An unseasonably warm March led to early crop development. Everything across the state is ahead of schedule, and it doesn't matter if you're talking about the wheat crop or fruit trees.”

March 2012 was the warmest March in Kentucky since records were first kept 115 years ago. Average temperatures were 11 degrees above normal, said Tom Priddy, meteorologist in the UK College of Agriculture.

Harvesting this early may not necessarily be a bad thing for producers.

“This year, it has definitely helped, because I'm going to mix it in with my ration and save some of my corn silage,” Gaskins said.

“It could wind up being a tremendous benefit for farmers,” Roy said. “We've had nice weather the last few weeks without any rain to slow farmers down. Harvesting this crop earlier than normal is also going to allow farmers to get their corn silage crop out earlier than usual which may provide better yields for corn silage.”

Plan now to control vegetable diseases all season long

By Katie Pratt

With many vegetables already in the ground or soon-to-be planted, home gardeners can incorporate a few simple practices into their management programs to minimize diseases this growing season, said Kenny Seebold, extension plant pathologist for the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Growers should consult their seed supplier or catalog for the availability of disease-resistant varieties.

“Resistant varieties can reduce or sometimes completely prevent damage from certain diseases and can allow a gardener to use less fungicide as well,” Seebold said.

When planting vegetables, growers may want to rotate where specific vegetables are planted in the garden. Crop rotation can help slow the build-up of pathogens that might have overwintered in the soil. Ideally, gardeners should do three-year rotations with each vegetable, planting them and similar plants in a different location each year. While this may seem hard to accomplish with limited space, keeping records of where things were planted each year can help.

Vegetable gardeners can also help prevent diseases by creating an environment that is unfavorable for disease development. This includes making sure plants have proper spacing, choosing a site with well-drained soils, only watering when necessary and only wetting the soil, not the leaves.

“Wet foliage can favor disease development and spread,”

he said.

Gardeners should also clean and sanitize their tools after each use as plant pathogens can easily spread from tools to other plants. Any diseased plants should be removed from the garden and destroyed.

While UK specialists encourage growers to use preventative measures for disease control, diseases do sometimes develop, and gardeners need to use fungicides to control the disease. Home gardeners do not have as many products available to them as commercial growers. Gardeners should make sure they correctly follow application instructions on the label and get good coverage. For best results, apply fungicides before diseases occur when conditions are favorable for disease development or at the latest, when disease first appears. The UK Cooperative Extension publication ID-128: “Home Vegetable Gardening in Kentucky” has information related to products home gardeners can use, diseases controlled and use-rates, as well as information on preventative practices. This publication is available online <http://www.ca.uky.edu/agc/pubs/id/id128/id128.pdf> or through county extension offices.

Time to think about termites

Source: Mike Potter, UK extension entomologist

Springtime, with its warmer temperatures and more abundant rainfall, is typically when many winged termites emerge inside homes and other structures. Termites swarm from the colony to disburse, fall to the ground, find mates and start new colonies in the soil.

From now through May, you might see swarms of winged termites, called swarmers, inside your home, signaling an infestation that can cause extensive and costly damage. Since swarmers are attracted to light, you often see them, or their shed wings, around windows, doors and light fixtures.

We also see winged ants in the springtime. By examining the insect you can learn whether it's a termite or an ant. Termites have straight antennae; ants have elbowed antennae. Also, termites have uniform waists; ants have constricted waists between body regions. Termites have two pair of wings of equal size. Ants also have two pair of wings, but the forewings are longer than the hind wings.

Other signs of a termite infestation are pencil-thin mud “tubes” on inside and outside surfaces such as foundation walls, piers, sills and floor joists. Termites make these mud tunnels to travel between underground colonies and your home. Another sign of an infestation is damaged wood hollowed out along the grain with dried bits of mud or soil lining the feeding galleries.

Termite feeding, and resulting damage, can remain undetected in exposed wood because the outer surface usually is left intact.

You can reduce the risk of a termite attack by following these suggestions:

- Store wood off of the ground.
- Keep moisture from accumulating near the foundation.
- Reduce humidity in crawl spaces.
- Store firewood, lumber or other wood debris away from the foundation.
- Don't store wood in the crawl space.
- Sparingly use decorative wood chips and mulch.
- Consider having your home treated by a professional pest control firm.

Many infestations result from direct contact between structural wood and the soil, which gives termites access to food, moisture, shelter and provides a hidden entry into your home. Make sure to have at least six inches between the ground level and wood siding, porch steps, latticework, door or window frames, posts and similar wooden elements. Contrary to popular belief, pressure-treated wood isn't immune to infestation because termites will enter through cut ends or cracks and build tunnels over the surface to susceptible wood above.

Since termites are attracted to moisture, they are more likely to enter a structure when soil next to the foundation consistently is moist. So, divert water away from the foundation with properly functioning gutters, downspouts and splash blocks. Repair leaking faucets, water pipes and air conditioning units. Adjust the soil grade next to the foundation so that surface water drains away from the building, and adjust lawn sprinklers and irrigation systems to minimize water pooling near the foundation.

Reduce humidity in crawl spaces by providing adequate ventilation. Don't allow shrubbery and other vegetation to grow over vents; it will inhibit cross-ventilation. You can reduce crawl space moisture by installing four to six milliliter polyethylene sheeting over about 75 percent of the soil surface.

Firewood, lumber and other wood debris stored against the foundation or in crawl spaces, attract termites and provide a food source. This practice also gives termites a hidden entry into the home and allows them to bypass any existing termiticide soil barrier.

Cellulose-containing materials including mulch and wood chips attract termites.

Foothills Academy earns PRIDE volunteerism award

Foothills Academy volunteers picked up litter during the Dale Hollow Spring Cleanup on April 14.

The PRIDE Volunteer of the Month Award was presented Saturday to Foothills Academy, which is a residential program for troubled boys from 13 to 18 years of age.

Foothills Academy, located in Albany, earned the award for its long-standing commitment to volunteering for local cleanup events. Students and staff members volunteer for the area's annual events — such as the Friends of Lake Cumberland Cleanup, Dale Hollow Spring Cleanup and Grider Hill Dock Cleanup — as well as other cleanup projects, as needed.

"We want to thank these young men, as well as the Foothills Academy staff, for making the environment one of their priorities when serving the community," said PRIDE's Tammie Wilson, who presented the award during the volunteer appreciation picnic that followed the Dale Hollow Spring Cleanup.

"When a cleanup is being organized, we can count on Foothills to participate in a big way," Wilson said. "They work hard, accomplish a lot, and seem to have a good time together."

"Foothills students have earned a reputation for answering any call to volunteer, and the community has come to depend on their service," Wilson added. "From setting-up at benefit concerts to installing nature trails, these young men show up to help. They're a blessing."

"We want to give something back to the community," said Rick Thrasher, Director of Foothills Academy. "Our kids come from troubled backgrounds and may have caused some problems in the past, so volunteering gives them a chance to do something positive. It gives them a sense of self worth when they can help others."

"The students enjoy volunteering, too," Thrasher added. "They look forward to the cleanups."

"They always comment on the amount and variety of trash they find, from billfolds to clothing," Thrasher said. "At the Lake Cumberland Cleanup last year, our students were really excited to find a unique coin from the Dominican Republic, and it won the prize for the most unusual piece of trash."

The PRIDE Volunteer of the Month program recognizes hard work and dedication to the PRIDE initiative, which promotes environmental education and cleanup efforts in 38 counties of southern and eastern Kentucky. With corporate sponsorship from TECO Coal, commercials about each PRIDE Volunteer of the Month are broadcast on WYMT-TV, which is the CBS affiliate in Hazard.

"Volunteers are the backbone of PRIDE," said Congressman Hal Rogers, who co-founded PRIDE. "We wouldn't be where we are without our volunteers. More than 360,000 volunteers have helped with PRIDE cleanup and education projects. We want to thank TECO Coal for helping PRIDE give these generous people the recognition they deserve."

"Please tell us about PRIDE volunteers who impressed you because we want to thank them," Wilson said. "You can call our office at 606-677-6150 or go online to submit a nomination for the PRIDE Volunteer of the Month Award."

Lincoln’s funeral train leaves D. C.

April 21, 1865
A train carrying the coffin of assassinated President Abraham Lincoln leaves Washington, D. C. on its way to Springfield, Illinois, where he would be buried on May 4.
The train carrying Lincoln’s body traveled through 189 cities and seven states on its way to Lincoln’s home state of Illinois. Scheduled stops for the special funeral train were published in newspapers. At each stop, Lincoln’s coffin was taken off the train, placed on an elaborately decorated horse-drawn hearse and led by solemn processions to a public building for viewing. In cities as large as Columbus, Ohio, and as small as Herkimer, New York, thousands of mourners flocked to pay tribute to the slain president. In Philadelphia, Lincoln’s body lay in state in the east wing of Independence Hall, the same site where the Declaration of Independence was signed. Newspapers reported that people had to wait more than five hours to pass by the president’s coffin in some cities.
Lincoln’s funeral train was dubbed The Lincoln Special. His portrait was fastened to the front of the engine above the cattle guard. Approximately 300 people accompanied Lincoln’s body on the 1,654 mile journey, including his eldest son Robert. Also on the train was a coffin containing the body of Lincoln’s son, Willie, who had died in 1862 at the age of 11 of typhoid fever during Lincoln’s second year in office. Willie’s body had been disinterred from a plot in Washington, D. C. after Lincoln’s death so he could be buried alongside his father at the family plot in Springfield.
In 1911, a prairie fire near Minneapolis, Minnesota, destroyed the train car that had so famously carried Lincoln’s body to its final resting place.

Space telescope in orbit

April 25, 1990
The crew of the U. S. space shuttle Discovery places the Hubble Space Telescope, a long-term space-based observatory, into a low orbit around Earth.
The space telescope, conceived in the 1940s, designed in the 1970s, and built in the 1980s, was designed to give astronomers an unparalleled view of the solar system, the galaxy, and the universe. Initially, Hubble’s operators suffered a setback when a lens aberration was discovered, but a repair mission by space-walking astronauts in December 1993 successfully fixed the problem, and Hubble began sending back its first breathtaking images of the universe.
Free of atmospheric distortions, Hubble has a resolution 10 times that of ground-based observatories. About the size of a bus, the telescope is solar-powered and orbits Earth once about every 97 minutes. Among its many astronomical achievements, Hubble has been used to record a comet’s collision with Jupiter, provide a direct look at the surface of Pluto, view distant galaxies, gas clouds, and black holes, and see billions of years into the universe’s past.

VFW urges statehood for Alaska and Hawaii

Terming House approval of statehood bills for Alaska and Hawaii a “step in the right direction,” the Veterans of Foreign Wars called for speedy ratification by the Senate, according to an announcement by Commander Horace Hay of VFW Post 1096.
“Our national security demands immediate congressional action conferring statehood on our two Pacific outposts,” Hay declared.
“In the interest of U. S. national security, it is imperative that our congressmen put aside the petty bickerings that have delayed action on the Alaskan and Hawaiian statehood bills. Immediate ratification of the vital measures is mandatory,” he asserted.
Your local VFW Post 1096 urges every eligible veteran who is interested in this issue to attend the VFW meetings which are held each first and third Thursday nites.

Canners now freeze milk and coffee

The spectacular success of frozen orange juice is luring a host of other new frozen concentrates into the market.
Frozen grape juice, grapefruit, and orange-grapefruit blends already are selling as fast as they can be stocked. Frozen tomato juice is being test-marketed in five cities. Tangerine juice is being quick frozen on a small scale.
The concentrates are not restricted just to fruit juices. Frozen coffee is reported doing well. The first frozen chocolate drink is scheduled to be introduced this week. Several large milk canners are engaged in research toward a milk concentrate.
Around 100,000 gallons of frozen orange juice was produced back in 1946. Last year sales soared to 100 times that figure. The second biggest item among the concentrates at present is grape juice. Frozen prune juice is touted as “a drink that’s going to surprise a lot of people who never knew what the natural juice tastes like.”

Kentucky Facts and Trivia:

There is a legend that the inspiration for Stephen Foster’s hymn like song “My Old Kentucky Home” was written in 1852 after an unverified trip to visit relatives in Kentucky.
This legend has since been disproved. Richard Jackson believes Foster took his inspiration from Harriet Beecher Stowe’s 1851 bestseller “Uncle Tom’s Cabin” and hoped to exploit its popularity. In Foster’s sketchbook, the song was titled “Poor Uncle Tom, Good Night” and each verse ended with the line “Den poor Uncle Tom, good night.” Jackson describes the song as “one of Foster’s most appealing nostalgia pieces.” Abolitionist Frederick Douglass thought the song stimulated “the sympathies for the slave, in which antislavery principles take root and flourish.”
“My Old Kentucky Home” became the official state song of Kentucky on March 19, 1928 by an act of the Kentucky legislature, but, by 1986, opinions had changed on the appropriateness of the lyrics. Representative Carl Hines, the only black member of the Kentucky House of Representatives at the time, was quoted as saying that the lyrics “convey connotations of racial discrimination that are not acceptable.” Hines sponsored a bill to revise the lyrics, and, with the passage of House resolution 159, the word “darkies” was changed to “people.”
“My Old Kentucky Home” is also the official song of the Kentucky Derby, is played at both University of Kentucky and University of Louisville basketball and football games, and was a favorite of Kentucky Governor Happy Chandler, who frequently sang the song whenever he was presented with the opportunity.

Trooper Island Dodge Challenger raffle tickets available at local outlets

The Kentucky State Police is featuring a modern interpretation of a heritage-inspired American muscle car for its Trooper Island raffle this year: the 2012 Dodge Challenger R/T Classic.

Shrewdly engineered with modern performance advancements and the DNA of its legendary forefather, the Challenger hits the road with a 5.7-liter, 372-horsepower HEMI V8 engine that delivers a throaty rumble and fuel saving technology of up to 25 mpg highway.

It's driver-friendly with a five-speed automatic transmission and its rear-wheel drive suspension transfers hardcore power to the road providing moves to match its muscle.

A sculpted, pitch black exterior makes it a real looker with a lean, menacing, low profile that features a stylish, long-nose form with functional hood scoops, hood-to-fender stripes, a rear spoiler and power sun roof.

The upscale, dark slate gray cabin provides comfortable seating for five and best in class rear head and leg room. Topped off with a spacious 16.2 cubic inch cargo trunk and more than 45 safety and security features, the Challenger sits apart from the pack with an unbeatable combination of fun, nostalgia, power and functionality.

Tickets are $10 each. For a chance to put your brand on a 2012 Dodge Challenger, contact any Kentucky State Trooper, Commercial Vehicle Enforcement Officer or any of the 16 KSP posts located throughout the state. Only 20,000 tickets will be sold.

In addition, tickets may be purchased at four locations in Albany - the Clinton County News at 116 N. Washington Street, Monticello Banking Company Albany Branch on Cross Street, the office of Dr. Michael Cummings in the Twin Lakes Medical Arts Building and at Winsett Family Photography Studio on Rainbow Drive in Albany.

The winning ticket will be drawn on August 26th at the Kentucky State Fair. Ticket holders do not have to be present at the drawing to win. Raffle winner is responsible for all tax and license fees.

Trooper Island is a free summer camp for underprivileged boys and girls age 10-12 operated by the Kentucky State Police on Dale Hollow Lake in Clinton County. It is financed entirely by donations, no public funds are used.

Each year, the camp hosts approximately 700 children, providing good food, fresh air, recreation, guidance and structure and esteem-building activities designed to build good citizenship and positive relationships with law enforcement officers.

Replace your old light bulbs this Earth Day

(StatePoint) The way you light your home could be putting a needless strain on your pocket-book and the planet.

According to the US Environmental Protection Agency, if every household replaced just one light bulb with an ENERGY STAR qualified bulb, we would save enough energy to light three million homes for a year, trim $600 million in annual energy costs, and prevent nine billion pounds of greenhouse gas emissions yearly.

And just think how much you can save if you swapped all your old incandescent light bulbs for new, energy-efficient ones.

If you've heard the terms CFL, halogen and LED, you know you have options when it comes to efficient lighting. But if you're unsure what's right for you, spend this Earth Day, April 22, brushing up on the different types of bulbs and where they work best in your home:

CFLs
Unlike incandescent bulbs, CFLs contain minute amounts of mercury gas which produce invisible ultraviolet (UV) light. When the UV light hits the white coating inside the fluorescent bulb, it changes into the light you see.

CFLs use up to 75 percent less energy than incandescents and last up to 10 times longer. But because they operate with a delayed start, they can take up to three minutes to reach full light output. Opt for CFLs anywhere full-brightness isn't immediately needed, like bedrooms and common areas. For enhanced ambience and energy savings, try a dimmable bulb like GE's new Energy Smart Dimmable Spiral CFL, which allows you to dim your lights down to five percent.

Halogens
Halogen bulbs have a tungsten filament just like standard incandescents, but use 28 percent less energy. When lit, tungsten from the filament evaporates into the bulb's gas, providing illumination.

Halogen bulbs are traditionally used for high-intensity reading lamps, outdoor lighting, and display lighting, but are now commonly used for general purposes too.

Hybrids
For the energy-savings of CFLs, but the look, and instant brightness of incandescents, try a hybrid. For example, GE Lighting's Bright From the Start Energy Smart CFL, an ENERGY STAR qualified Bulb, is housed in an incandescent-shaped bulb and hides an instant-on halogen capsule inside the swirl of a C

LEDs
LEDs are small light sources illuminated by movement of electrons through semiconductor material. Though still considered an expensive option, this technology will pay for itself. LEDs last more than two decades, as much as 25 times longer than incandescents and halogens, and up to three times longer than CFLs.

LEDs allow for compact, design-forward fixtures and are ideal for illuminating areas where homeowners don't have to worry about changing the bulb often. Opt for a design like GE's Energy Smart LED bulbs, which allow light to be directed all around, not just in one direction like most LEDs, and have incandescent-like dimming capabilities.

More information on energy efficient lighting, including an energy savings calculator, can be found at www.gelighting.com/lighttransforms.

This Earth Day, make a big impact with small actions.
